

The Online Design Process

Obtaining a design and quote from Kitchen Finesse using our online service couldn't be easier, all you need is an email address!

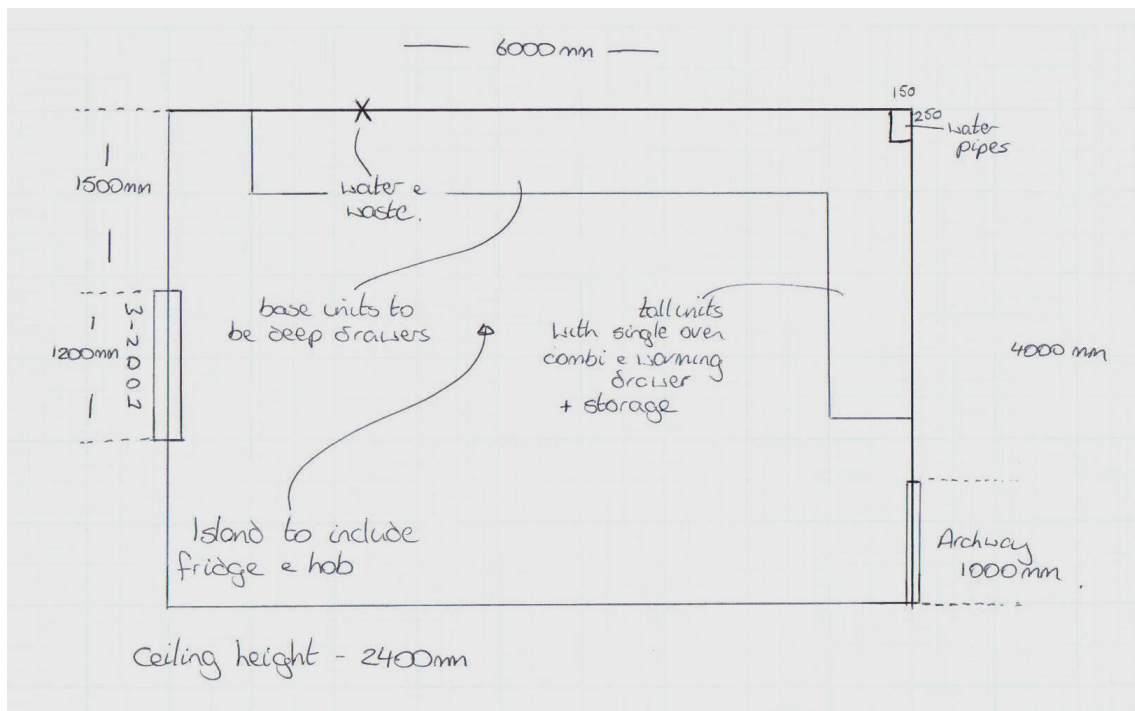

The following shows how the process works using one of our showroom displays as an example.

1. We need a plan and some basic information to work from:

Send us a floor plan of your kitchen either by post, email or using our online design form. This plan can be as basic or detailed as you like but it should contain the following basic information:

- Room dimensions (including ceiling height if possible)
- Position and dimensions of any windows and doors
- Position of any permanent features such as pipework, chimney breasts etc
- Details of any preferences you have for the position of appliances

Example Floor Plan

We will also need details of the door style that you prefer, if you know the make, range and colour that would also be helpful. If you are not sure then if you can give us a general idea of the style you are looking for we'll be happy to suggest a specific door.

In case we have any questions please can you also give us a phone number as well as your email address.

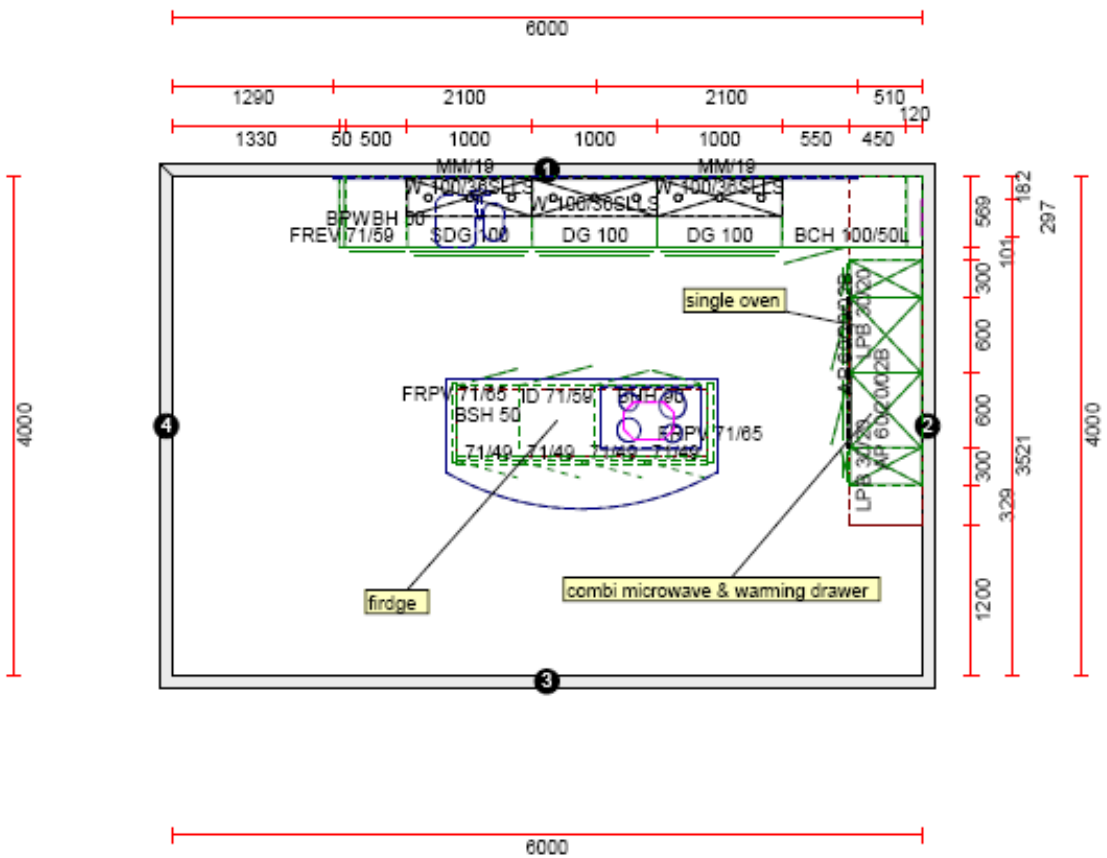

2. We will now prepare an initial design for you:

Using our state of the art CAD software we will prepare a number of photo quality images of the design which we will email to you as JPEG files. At the same time we will email you 2 PDF files, one of the floor plan with all the room dimensions that we have used the second is a fully itemised quote.

Example Images & Floor Plan

3. Changes to the Initial Design:

Contact us by phone or email and we will work through any queries you may have, changes you may want to look at and so on. We will then make the alterations discussed and email you a revised set of images and floor plan quote.

4. Ordering your new kitchen:

Once you are happy with the design, we will email you a final floor plan and quote which you will need to print off, sign and date each page including the floor plan and post them back to us.

5. The final product:

As you can see from the following images of our showroom display that we are using here as an example the images we email to you are an excellent representation of your new kitchen.

